GÖRG advises FEHRMANN on Joint Venture with CREMER

GÖRG Partnerschaft von Rechtsanwälten mbB has advised high-tech company FEHRMANN on a joint venture with the international trading group CREMER.

The joint venture company FEHRMANN ALLOYS GmbH produces innovative high performance aluminum alloys for sand casting and 3D printing. The partners perfectly complement one another: FEHRMANN contributes the technical and metallurgical know-how while CREMER provides instant access to global markets through its powerful network. With its proprietary high performance alloys and the brand new alloy system "AIMgty" the joint venture is already an innovation leader in the rapidly growing 3D printing market.

The partners' commitment is reflected by the fact that with Henning Fehrmann and Anthony Cremer the owner level will be represented in the joint venture's management.

About FEHRMANN

Established 1895 as a traditional foundry, FEHRMANN today is a leading manufacturer of safety and pressure-tight windows as well as special purpose aluminum alloys. The company's windows were, inter alia, used in the German research icebreaker Polarstern and landmarks as the Hamburg Elphilharmonie and the Berlin Fernsehturm. Cast parts made of FEHRMANN's proprietary alloys provide highest security standards for, inter alia, pipelines and silo wagons. The Hamburg based company is led by Dipl.-Ing. Henning Fehrmann in fifth generation.

About CREMER

Hamburg family firm CREMER has 70 years experience in international trade in raw materials and minerals, including the relevant logistics, and recently started selling metal powder for 3D printing. With 67 subsidiaries and 30 sales units throughout the world, CREMER is one of the big global players.
